Fresno Camera Club—July Highlights

Hello all,

So how is everybody's "Long Hot Summer" going? Mine has been a whirlwind of house repairs. UGH! Seems like Murphy's Law is alive and kicking. I'm hoping that black cloud has moved on.

Now I really have to get out of town. Going to San Francisco this month to celebrate

Loye and Shelley's anniversary. Going to Alcatraz for the first time, I'm really excited about that. We are going to try and take photos of some of the popular things but try to photograph them in a different way. This could be interesting. Could be fun trying to be creative.

I hope all of you enjoyed your 4th of July and stayed safe. Remember our BBQ on the 16th. It's a print competition and Gary Stewart is coming up from the LA area to judge. Come and hang out with us it's a nice time to socialize with each other. Of course we will be having our favorite chefs BBQ the tri tip. So bring a dish and $15.00 and let's have some fun.

1891- Fresno Camera Club

One hundred twenty five years ago photographers road horse and buggy with tripod and camera in tow. It quite often took more than one person to carry the clumsy equipment. A flash of gunpowder provided a light source. The exposures were long, with the slightest movement evident in some of the blurred photo prints that we see today.

One such photographer, Perry Adams, started the Fresno Camera Club in 1891. Perry Adams son was present at the clubs seventieth anniversary in 1961 when a young Hanna Barsam was president of the club.

This year we celebrate the one hundred and twenty fifth year of the Fresno Camera Club. We can faintly imagine what took place then, I'm sure that they would be astonished by the activity that is going on today. We have a responsibility to take advantage of all that is available out there in today's climate, we owe it to our photography pioneers from 1891.

So, as we start the year 2016, let's all do our best to uphold the legacy of a group of true explorers in the relatively unknown realm of photography.

June Meeting Recap

Judge: Jim Cunningham

Visitors: Lance MacKay, Dennis Simonson

Dee started the meeting at 7 pm.

Fresno Camera Club has never had a budget. After looking over our expenses, it was decided we needed to start putting a budget together for the club. Some of the changes were increasing costs of our Christmas Luncheon and our Summer BBQ as well as printing a flier instead of the Highlights each month.

The annual BBQ will be at Hope Lutheran Church on July 16, 2016. Cost for the BBQ will be $15 each. This covers the room rental, the décor and the meat. Sign up with Shelley to bring a side dish, desert, or appetizer. (see page 9 for more information)

One of the items brought up during our June Board Meeting was dividing the prints into two categories similar to how it is done in council. It was decided to look at the year end numbers and see who would be moved to the higher group.

There will be an Art Hop Meeting at Horn Photo Education Center on July 12th for those who have previously signed up to participate in Art Hop.

We are currently looking for a new Print Chairman. Jim Wulf will be leaving in September. Please let us know if you are interested!

Our Judge tonight is Jim Cunningham. Jim selected Cactus Flower by Guenter Krueger.

Image of the Night

Cactus Flower

By Guenter Krueger

Photo taken on April 10, 2016. We were living in our house in Sun City, AZ at the time. From previous experience we knew that the white cactus flowers bloomed early in April. In walking around the block late in the afternoon we still did not see any signs of flowers. In looking out the window the next day, the white flowers emerged over night and were in bloom. We had things to do, so by the time we went out to take some photos in the late afternoon the flowers were starting to wilt, and they were done the next morning. Two days later I looked out the window and saw new white flowers at the houses up the street. It was starting to rain at around 11:30 AM so I just walked across the street and took my photos. The cloudy weather gave me some nice shadow free light and the rain added water droplets to the petals. I stood back and used the maximum power of the lens to fill the frame. I shot the image in RAW format and edited the image using Photoshop Elements 14.

Tiles, Dunes and Sky

By: Patrick Rhames

David Hunter and I travelled to Eureka Dunes in Death Valley in late December, 2015. This shot is of the Dunes taken from South, facing North. The time was early-afternoon but we had the clouds seen in the shot diffusing the light to some degree. There were still strong shadows, but they actually helped in several other shots.

Tiles, Dunes and Sky by Patrick Rhames

This image was rendered as an HDR composit using 9 bracketed frames, one stop apart. Because the clouds were moving fast across the sky and the duplicate images were obvious, I selected one of the frames to “drop in” above the horizon line to create a “normal” sky.

The image was captured with my trusty Nikon D800E, mounted with a Nikkor 24-70 f/2.8 lens. Aperture set to f/22 and focal length to 24mm. Hyperfocal focusing was used to keep the image sharp all the way through. (At 24mm the hyperfocal distance is 3 ft.) A sturdy tripod was used, camera shutter mode set to mirror up with a remote shutter release. The camera’s Virtual Horizon feature was employed to square the focal plane to level.

In post process, raw camera adjustments were made in Lightroom. Photoshop was used for refinement with additional work done on it using NIK software including Viveza 2, Color Efex Pro 4, Silver Efex Pro 2 and Sharpener Pro 3. Filters of significance included a subtle luminosity S curve applied in Color Efex and a subtle magenta filter effect in Silver Efex.

David Hunter demands credit for dragging my aged body into the desert at that time of the year. It was the coldest place I have ever been at +15 degrees the first night.

Art Hop Meeting

There will be a meeting for Art Hop participants on Tuesday, July 12, 2016, at the Horn Photo Education Center at 7 p.m. We will be going over Art Hop requirements.
