Digital Chairs Report – April 2018

For our second Digital meeting of 2018 I again received images from 21 members for a total of 63, though we had some new people entering, and a few from February did not enter in April In general file sizing and naming was better than February and we didn't have any issues with the sequence the images came up in.

The subjects of the images were again from a wide variety of subject matter, the usual selection of creative manipulations thrown in.

Our judge of this competition was former member Dennis Montejano, and he showed a short video of drone footage he had shot containing a number of different locations before we started. As always Dennis gave us great critique and suggestions for improving the images presented. Dennis gave himself a tough job of selecting the image of the night after awarding 21 images a perfect 10. Dr. Ning Lin continued his trek to the top with another night of three perfect 10's, the second digital competition in a row. Thanks go to John Crawford for stepping in and reading out titles, makers and recording the scores as a back up to the electronic scoring.

Image of the night was Ning Lin, with Milky Way at Yosemite Glacier Point, 2nd place went to Jonathan Rollins with Oregon Coast, 3rd place was Anna Hadfield with Clouds and Rain Approach and 4th place was Loye Stone with Overlooking Monument Valley.

Milky Way at Yosemite Glacier Point

By Ning Lin

This was taken from Glacier Point in Yosemite National Park on June 3, 2016. By calculation, that was a perfect night for milky way photography, clear sky, 6% moon light, moon set at 6:42 pm, and milky way arising a few hours later. I arrived Glacier Point before sunset. The sunset was not very impressive as predicted. I waited for the blue hour and shot the foreground with low ISO (400), long exposure (30 sec). Three panes were shot and then stitched in Photoshop. Keeping the camera in the same spot, 3 more panes were shot for milky way in a few hours later. The milky way was photographed with high ISO (4000), 20 sec and f2.8. After merging in Photoshop, two panoramic images were blended together. I converted it to black and white to show ancient mood. Camera: Canon 5D mark III, Lens: 16-35mm at 16mm.

It was a beautiful day when we visited last year and this Native American Navaho road his horse onto the overlook. Canon 5d Mark III, 24-105 lens (47mm) 1/250 sec., ISO 200. Monument Valley will forever be on my top three list of places to photograph.
